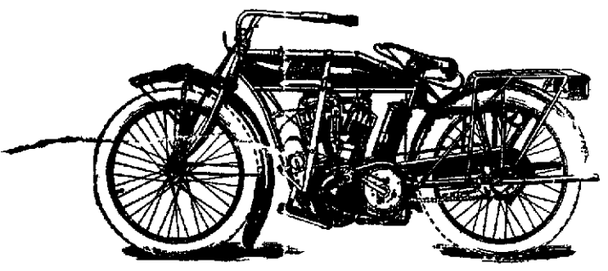
1913 Models of the Indian Motorcycle



Following the "14 Important Improvements" of 1912 the Hendee Mfg Company announce no less than a dozen additional new features in the 1913 model of the Indian Motorcycle

By far the most significant feature of the new machine is the Cradle Spring Frame It is something entirely new a radical departure from the conventional bicycle and recent motorcycle systems of springing Briefly the new device consists of the application to the rear wheel of the Indian Cradle Spring device as used on the front fork for the past three years

Extending back horizontally from the frame joint cluster under the saddle flanking the rear mud guard are two 7 leaf Chrome Vanadium steel springs The 'C' shaped curls at the rear end of these springs are connected by stays to bell cranks on which the rear axle is hung The forward end of the rear fork has a hinge joint which enables the rear wheel to yield to imperfections of road surface All shocks are completely absorbed by the leaf springs The rear wheel can go through almost any vertical motion without affecting the body of the machine There is no "bottom" to this spring device The life of the machine is greatly increased

The Engineering Department of the Hendee Mfg Co devoted 18 months of exhaustive test to the Cradle Spring Frame before finally deciding on its adoption for all models of the 1913 Indian

In addition to the Cradle spring frame the 1913 Indian embodies 10 other important improvements which will be appreciated by motorcycle riders Prices remain the same as last year

New style, single clinch rims larger tires wider mudguards front and rear with larger splashes, casing for upper stretch of transmission chain adjustable of sprocket larger luggage carrier in rear, fitted to all models foot rests as well as pedals, fitted to regular 4 h p and 7 h p models, foot brake lever fitted on left side now operates band brake as well as the pedal action larger size multiple disc clutch now fitted to all models alike improved Indian type saddle

All 1913 Indians will be chain driven and finished in Indian red only

LETTER FROM DOYLESTOWN

Speculating as to What Bull Moose Party Will Do--Topics of Interest at County Seat.

Doylestown, Nov 13

From early morning till late at night at the county seat there is still politics, nothing but politics and when the general issue slacks up a little bitter personalities are frequently indulged in by many of the rank and file of all three parties, for we sure have three national parties now. The older hands at the game are already attempting to figure on the bearing of this election on the result next year Will the Roosevelt supporters maintain their organization and nominate a county ticket next year

In the present state of political affairs this becomes a serious question to many prospective candidates for the three county offices to be filled next year which are prominent and important ones Judge of the Courts, District Attorney and Prothonotary, and care should be taken to select the best material for all three

While it is too early yet to use the names of those talked of for the three offices it is not too early to give the warning go slow" Of course the last election has shorn the bosses of their power and it is almost a sure proposition that there will be no slated candidates next time Grundy will have to keep hands off and let every aspirant have a chance in the game or else his ticket will not be supported by many who voted for 'Taft' Still he will be a power in local county politics that will have to be reckoned with and who while he may take no active part will still have the regular organization with him in many ways

No more is one election over at the county seat than another comes treading on its heels This time it will be an election held by the school board to obtain permission to increase its indebtedness twenty thousand dollars to afford them sufficient funds to complete the annex to the present school building now in course of construction The annex was started at a time when the new school code had just gone into operation and several costly changes in the original plans had to be made to comply with the new law At present the greater part of the work is either completed, or well under way, and should operations be halted for any length of time would result in material damage to the work already done At first there was serious opposition to the proposed additional loan but as time goes on the opposition is gradually melting away and our progressive citizens will all fall into line and do their duty in the matter That there will be some votes against the new loan goes without saying for the county seat has its share of back numbers just as other places have and the man who owns no property and only pays an occupation tax is the one who always protests loudest against public improvements Naturally the school board will some day have to give an accounting of their stewardship and no one doubts but that in the end we will all know that they have done as well under their handicapped conditions as could be expected of them

On Tuesday night the 'unterrified" turned out in full force with brass bands red lights, torches, etc, and celebrated the election of Woodrow Wilson to the highest office in the gift of the people The parade was headed by a large number of automobiles containing many members of the 'Old Guard' Two bands furnished the music and a large number of mounted men as well as footmen made up the parade, together with floats and a special feature, the Democratic mewl leading a large elephant and a young bull moose.

Dr William E Geil evangelist, explorer and author, who is building a handsome mansion just south of the county seat has quite a tract of woodland on his property in which a large colony of grey squirrels had made their home The squirrels were very tame and easily approached To make assurance doubly sure Dr Geil placarded his woodland with 'no trespass' notices so that no one could possibly get into the wood without seeing one of them In spite of his precautions a number of gunners did go through his woods one day last week and killed nearly every one of the tame squirrels Fortunately Dr Geil has discovered three of the offenders and prosecutions have been lodged against them so that it will be a dear squirrel hunt to them

There has been very little of this character of violation of the law in the vicinity of the county seat of late years and it is to be hoped that this particular one will be made a warning to those disposed to do wrong

The W C T U, after years of effort has invaded the county seat and on last Monday afternoon perfected an organization If this organization pushes its work along the lines of punishing violators of the law the county seat will cease to become the Mecca of Boozers We now have two who were formerly Bristolians and the remark made by more than one Bristol officer 'that Bristol was glad to be rid of them" speaks volumes or the character and habits of the two men, one of them appears almost every Monday morning before a magistrate and pays his fine and costs and Bristol is not the only place that has furnished the county seat with "men of known intemperate habits" who seem to have no difficulty in getting all they want and a little more here

Small matters occupied the attention of the court here for the first three days of the week Two desertion cases took up about all of Monday In the first Lloyd Johnson, colored, who sometime ago was sentenced to pay three dollars and a half toward the support of his family of four children had his weekly dues reduced to two dollars and a half because his oldest son had become practically self supporting In the other case, that of Mrs Elizabeth Vanartsdalen vs Clarence Vanartsdalen, the parties all came from Richborough and it seemed a pity that the young people could not agree It was a case of high temper on both sides and under existing conditions it seemed about the best thing to do was to let each go their own way although from all the testimony in the case the man was not so much to blame as the woman. A man in a Bucks county court has mighty little show against a woman, especially in a jury trial, but when the glorious days of woman's emancipation comes and woman marches up to the polls and bravely deposits her ballot she will lose all the consideration that her sex now gives her and lose half or more of her voting power.

"Old Subscriber," 'Veritas," "A Sufferer" and others are now pleading the district attorney to bring about the trial of the Danboro pike and the Plumsteadville pike for maintaining a nuisance. These cases have been hanging fire for a considerable length of time and in the interests of [illegible] public should be tried at [illegible] the people who have to [illegible] just where they must [illegible] It is rumored that [illegible] State will build a [illegible] two thoroughfares [illegible] only rumor why [illegible] public suffer as [illegible] existing conditions.

The members of the Doylestown Nature Club are much exercised over the fact that a covey of quail has located on the eastern border of the town and are urging all sport-men to leave them in peace, of course the sportsmen won't shoot any of them but how about the other fellow If they are not disturbed the club will take measures to feed them on the fat of the land all winter and provide them with shelters against heavy snows.

Paul Pry Police.

The German police have a consuming curiosity about the visitor They are polite but the curiosity must be satisfied and it covers well nigh every point Much information can be given says Mrs Alfred Sidgwick in "Home Life in Germany"

Before you have been in Germany a fortnight the police expect to know all about you You have to give them your father's Christian and surname and tell them how he earned his living and where he was born, also your mother's Christian and maiden name and where she was born You must declare your religion and if you are married give your husband's Christian and surname also where he was born and what he does for a living If you happen to do anything yourself though you need not mention it They do not expect a woman to be earning further than married or single But you must say when and where you were last in Germany and how often you have been and why you have come now and what you are doing and how long you propose to stay

Emergency Gas Pliers

If at any time you need a pair of gas pliers perhaps to take off a gas tip that is not working well, and you have none at hand you can always make a pair that will do the work for the moment although they might not be just the thing for a gas fitter Take a large pair of scissors and you will find that where the handles join the blades they usually open out into a sort of oval By putting a piece of sandpaper or anything rough round the base of the gas burner you can place this open part of the handle of the scissors round it and then press the blades of the scissors together so as to get leverage enough to twist the burner loose There are many little light jobs that can be done with a pair of pliers made out of a pair of scissors If you are careful to have something between the handle and the object so as to prevent the scissors from slipping off—New York Sun

The Baby and the Junk Scales.

When a son was born to the head of a certain family in an Ohio town the proud father rushed out of the house to borrow a pair of scales Just as he dashed out of the gateway he ran into a junk dealer, who was calling out at the top of his lungs

Any rags any bottles, any"—

Look here!" exclaimed the excited parent 'Come into the house! I want you to weigh something for me"

The man did as requested The pink mite was tied up in a towel and hooked on to the scales

Six pounds!" cried the nurse

Six pounds! repeated the disappointed father

The junkman smiled, "Don't let that worry you, my friend," said he "Them is the scales I buys by I guess the kid weighs ten pounds, maybe a little over that."—Detroit Free Press

Solving the Old Problem.

When Sir Thomas Lipton was a small boy in Scotland he dropped into a church one Sunday morning and was put by himself in a pew directly in front of the minister, who preached a sermon on the text "Am I my brother's keeper?"

The parson, who was unusually eloquent talked on this theme for about forty minutes and finally worked up to the climax of his remarks He kept his gaze fixed directly on the little Lipton, who began to fidget and look very self conscious. At last, after an overwhelming outpouring of long words, the minister, his eyes blazing, made a quick gesture and shouted at the boy:

'Am I my brother's keeper?"

Lipton could stand the strain no longer, and replied in a meek voice

"No, sir"—Popular Magazine.

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

The Woman Makes the Home

She makes it best who, looking after the culinary department, turns her back resolutely upon unhealthful, or even suspicious, food accessories. She is economical; she knows that true economy does not consist in the use of inferior meat, flour, or baking powder. She is an earnest advocate of home made, home baked food, and has proved the truth of the statements of the experts that the best cooking in the world today is done with Royal Baking Powder.

THE PRESIDENT-ELECT.

To Woodrow Wilson, courageous fighter for good causes in New Jersey, the Gazette, with four thousand Progressive Republicans in Bucks county offers its congratulations on his call to a wider field of active human betterment

The Democratic party did itself lasting honor in its battle with sordid interests which culminated in the nomination of Mr Wilson With Democracy's return to power, under such a leader, the country will not be disposed to be over critical The Democratic President and Democratic Congressman have a hard road to travel Many will be the obstructions placed in their path selfish ambitions with in the party will cause as much trouble as the pitfalls constructed by the avowed enemies of the coming administration It will take much courage and fortitude to pursue an open and free course

Undoubtedly Mr Wilson's generous and fine spirit cherishes fine hopes of achievements for the common good But he will be beset upon every quarter by powerful interests that have thrived upon special privileges In attempting to realize his high ideals in the Nation's life, however he can depend on the cordial support of the members of the powerful new party that with this campaign has become a permanent feature of American politics.

As for the Gazette after the Republican convention at Chicago when a nomination was stolen from Theodore Roosevelt it decided to support Woodrow Wilson

When the new party was formed at the second Chicago convention and Roosevelt was made the leader of that party we cast our lot with the new organization We stood and stand yet for the great human policies of the Progressive platform and of Theodore Roosevelt—for collective action to insure a healthful normal, happy childhood for every boy and girl to protect the helpless from exploitation to safeguard the life of families through social insurance to conserve the Nation's human resources and to give to half of the people, of mature age, the right of franchise, who are now debarred from the privilege of the ballot, and who pay taxes without representation

We stand for these policies They are worth fighting for The Gazette expects to do what it can under Wilson, in its meagre way, as it would have done under Roosevelt, had he been elected

Tariff, currency and involved policies of administration sink into insignificance in comparison to the cause of human rights

All honor to President elect Woodrow Wilson May his courageous spirit never be daunted during the four years of his first national administration

The dispatches explain that Frances Folsom Cleveland was 22 years old when she was married in 1886 Is there a woman in the world who didn't reach for a pencil and begin to figure out how old she is now?

NO DEMOCRATIC LANDSLIDE.

After the election last week, which resulted in the election of Woodrow Wilson, newspapers all over the country heralded the event as an overwhelming landslide which swept the Democratic candidates into office The fact is there was not even a semblance of a landslide to Democracy The Democratic party scarcely held its own in the recent election and in a great many states the vote for Wilson was considerably less than the vote for Bryan four years ago The Democratic Presidential candidate was elected by reason of the split in the Republican ranks and the great vote polled for Theodore Roosevelt

According to the United States census figures compiled during President Taft's administration, two thirds of the families of this country have an income of less than $900 per year Those two-thirds of our population must rigidly economize in order to exist. Those two-thirds of our population can control elections and get fair laws put upon the statute books, if they would be determined to do so, and it looks as though they had set about to do it

"Can those who pay little or no taxes," asks John Wanamaker, "be the best judges of what is for the country's good" Well whenever there is any fighting to be done for the country's good it is invariably done by those who pay little or no taxes.

Wanted Them Matched

But wid all I is yah practisin' some o dese days she's gwine to git to be what they is a expert and bust me bodily."—Woman's Home Companion

RAZING HISTORIC DURHAM FURNACE

First Iron Works in Country, in Upper Bucks, Has Interesting History - The Old Corner-Stone

Just above what is now the village of Durham, Bucks county, where the Delaware river flows through a gap rivaling in picturesque beauty that of the Delaware or Lehigh [illegible] to the north of it, a band of men dressed in buckskins and armed with [illegible] locks in 1745 crouched in the woods.

Suddenly there was a puff of smoke from one of the guns Then was the signal for several of the men hidden in nearby growths to meet in a mounting band of Indians, and when both parties came together there were the most cordial greetings In white men were not there to fight the red men from the interior [illegible] province, but were to treat with the agents of William Penn for lands according to the walking purchase methods

With Penn's consent on one side and that of Tedyuscung, chief of the Delawares, who was then the owner of the lands on the other the settlers located there The colony soon became a neat hamlet of cheerful and prosperous people

Durham grew to be a conspicuous place about 1757 for there was operated the first iron works in the country and when the Revolutionary war broke out less than half a century after it provided shot and shell, guns, pans and skillets for the Continental army

Aside from being the home of the first iron industry it is credited with being the place where the boats were built that carried Washington and his army across the Delaware that memorable morning in December 1776

Now Philadelphia historians and members of patriotic societies are making the old town their Mecca for the last of the original iron works is being razed by Philadelphia contractors so that in a little while they only will be a memory

The corner stone of the old furnace, showing when the first works were erected, is in possession of Benjamin Eckenthall of Durham whose grandfather was an officer in the patriot army during the Revolutionary War The stone was presented to Mr Eckenthall by the firm of Cooper & Hewitt the last to operate the works and which exhibited it at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia It was this firm that built the last stack in the first half of the last century near where the original [illegible] was located

The old village in many ways has been closely associated with the commercial and industrial progress of Philadelphia It was from here local foundrymen for more than twelve generations received their supply of pig iron and merchants their skillets, pots and pans and old time cooking utensils

Philadelphians, who organized the old works originally were prominent in Provincial affairs and included Jeremiah Langhorne, Anthony Morris, George Ellis George W Fitzwater, Clement Plumstead Andrew Bradford, John Hopkins James Logan, Penn's secretary Thomas Lindlay and Joseph Turner, a City of Dublin"

Besides these projectors of the enterprises there was George Taylor of the Irish settlement in Northampton county one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, who was its lessee while it was turning out shot and shell during the Revolutionary War Taylor got a lease of the works from Joseph Galloway a member of the Pennsylvania Assembly of the First Congress and active in measures against the British crown He feared the cause of the Colonies would result disastrously and after deserting it he left for Europe

The lease of the Durham works he made with Taylor was for five years at an annual rental of £0 pounds sterling with a renewal of five years following with [illegible] was about to expire when Taylor's [illegible] the works were seized by the Patriot Agent for forfeiture [illegible] who contended they belonged to the absent Galloway

Taylor brought the matter of the seizure to the Supreme Court in Philadelphia, saying he was the lessee and on account of the state of affairs and scarcity of labor due to enlistments for war he was unable to make only a small quantity of shot and shell and is not now able to blow the furnace The court decided he should not be disturbed in possession of the furnace He showed the amount of shell and shot he made for the Continental government in the month of November 1780 to be two tons and each shell was worth two pounds sterling For the year the total output was worth 1079 pounds sterling and one shilling and two pence

In 1771 the output was value 1 at 1083 pounds sterling and included nine pounders and 60 lb headed shot that weighed from twenty to sixty pounds This ammunition was shipped to Philadelphia by boats on the Delaware and off times overland by route known only to the Patriots

It was while the British forces were stationed there that a squad of soldiers were captured near Bristol The shells were confiscated and the prisoners were turned over to General Howe

The primitive methods of making iron was not like that of today and charcoal was the fuel used in the furnace blasts With the discovery of anthracite in 1760 James Morgan said to have been a native of Wales, superintendent of the works experimented with hard coal because of its similarity to the cannel coal of his native country but failed to make iron with it The ovens were made to burn charcoal

There is a tradition handed down in Durham to this day that James Morgan was the father of Daniel Morgan, chief of Morgan Rifle Men during the Revolutionary War His torians credit the birthplace of General Morgan to the Morris colony in New Jersey and it was from there the hero's father went to Durham A short distance from the village the remnants of an Indian village and in the field adjoining it open and arrowheads are found occasionally The Site and Relic Society of Philadelphia, will erect a marking stone on the site where the first stack was erected

The Heavenly Music

From the German of Leander by ANNE W CAREW

When it was still that golden age when the angels played with the peasant children upon the sand-pile and the gates of Heaven stood wide open and heaven's splendor fell out on [illegible] it came upon the earth Men [illegible] earth into the open Heaven [illegible] the blessed ones above sang hymns, the stars, and men their greetings up and the [illegible] sent theirs down But [illegible] beautiful of all was the wonderful music when then was heard from Heaven [illegible] dear God had written the notes himself and a thousand angels performed with violins, kettledrums and trumpets When the music began to sound, [illegible] still upon the earth The wind ceased rustling and the waters in the sea and in the rivers stood still But men nodded to one another and silently pressed the others hands And as they listened so strange and wonderful a feeling came over them that one cannot possibly describe it now to any poor human heart

So it was then, but it did not last long For one day in punishment the dear God caused the gates of Heaven to be closed, and He said to the angels Cease with your music, for I am sad"

Then the angels too, were grieved, and they seized themselves each with his sheet of music upon a cloud, and with their little golden scissors they cut up all the sheets of music into little pieces These they suffered to fly down upon the earth There the wind took them, blew them like snow flakes over mountain and valley and scattered them through all the world And men caught, each one a little scrap some larger and some smaller and preserved them carefully and held them very dear, for it was, you know, something of the heavenly music which had so much been wonderful

But with time, men began to quarrel and dispute because each one believed that he had caught the best, until at last each one asserted that what he had was the real heavenly music and that which the others possessed was only delusion and pretence Those who wanted to be very clever and there were many of them, made a great flourish at the beginning and at the end, and they imagined there was something very remarkable in that One whistled And the other sang It, one played sharp and the other flat no one could understand the other In short, there was confusion as in a village school And so there is today

But when the Day of Doom shall come when the stars fall upon the earth and the sun into the sea and men crowd to the gates of Heaven like children at Christmas when the door is opened, then the dear God will cause all the scraps of his heavenly music back to be collected again by the angels the large as well as the small and even the very little ones upon which only one note stands written The angels will put the pieces together again, and then the gates will spring open and the heavenly music sound anew, as beautiful as before Then men will stand and listen surprised and ashamed, and one will say to the other "That was yours That was mine But now it sounds wonderously beautiful and very different now that all is together again and in the right place"

Yes yes So it will be You may depend upon it

When Ships Were Built in the Woods.

In [illegible] the shipping for our home trade and for sale abroad was built largely in the district of Maine and New Hampshire These two colonies built more than one half the entire American tonnage in the decade immediately preceding the Revolution The older ports could not compete with the new settlements amid the timber When the great trees had been exhausted on the river banks gangs of shipwrights went a mile or two into the forests and here on the uplands would build a vessel of 100 tons or more, mount her on strong sleds of timber hitch on a team of 200 oxen and [illegible] it in one steady pull over the snow to the [illegible] frozen surface of a navigable river [illegible] a team of oxen would be a quarter of a mile long and it took the teamsters help of a major general to start them all at once It was called raising them and this work once done nothing must stop them till the ship rested on the ice—Boston Globe

Grim Humor Saved His Life

When a spy was caught and brought before Marshal Bassompiere the marshal addressed him with the formula he always used when sentencing a man to death Brother you or I must certainly be hanged" Next day as the spy was being dragged to the gallows he adjured his jailers to allow him a last interview with the marshal as he had something of supreme importance to say to him The jailers were so impressed by his intense earnestness that they begged the marshal to give him audience

Being the dog latin cried Bassompiere What's your business" he asked the spy impatiently when he was dragged in Only this my lord At our last interview you said either you or I must be hanged Did you really mean that? It is of supreme importance to you or me because if you won't be hanged I must that is all The marshal was so tickled with the man's humor that he ordered his release—London Mail

Sluggish Rivers.

Considering its length the Volga is the most sluggish river In 2 325 miles it falls only 650 feet or slightly over three inches per mile while at one point about the middle of its course the bed is fully fifty feet below sea level It has all the water to that height above the bottom must be still save when stirred by floods

The Volga also is singular among great rivers in having no mountainous course It rises among marshes and lakes and is so sluggish even then that a dam has been erected which makes it navigable from its sixty fifth mile onward Almost within the historic period it must have been an offshoot from the Caspian, which then stretched far into the interior of Russia drying up into a series of river connected lakes The Volga has taken the place of these along with many of their characteristics, including a general sluggishness

The Scheldt is proverbially a slow river and is practically lost in a maze of canals but its fall from source to sea is about fourteen inches in its total length of 240 miles

"The Delight of Mankind"

Titus the Roman emperor was entitled the delight of mankind." Titus' beneficence was unbounded, and it so happened that during his brief reign there was the most urgent need of its exercise In the first year occurred the great eruption of Vesuvius overwhelming Herculaneum and Pompeii and ruining numerous other towns and villages The next year a fire broke out in Rome, which raged three days, causing great destruction, and in the tracks of these calamities followed a dreadful pestilence Titus dealt out gifts with lavish hand to the houseless and ruined sufferers. He even despoiled the palaces of their valuable ornaments to obtain money for distribution and schemed and planned to furnish occupation for them. He was now the idol of his subjects, the "love and delight of the human race," but, unfortunately for the part of the human race over which he ruled, in the commencement of the third year of his reign he became suddenly ill and died at his patrimonial villa in the Sabine country.

BULL MOOSE CALL

State Chairman Hicks Expresses Appreciation of Work Done and Asks that Work be Carried on

Thomas L Hicks, Chairman of the Washington State Central Committee, last Saturday, November 9th, issued the following message to members of the Washington Party

To the Washington Party of Pennsylvania

Men and Women, Greetings While the returns from Tuesday's election are not sufficient in detail to permit of fully determining the results, enough has been ascertained to admit the election of Mr Wilson as President and give confident assurances that Colonel Roosevelt is a splendid second in the race There is no doubt that in the popular vote the Colonel has outdistanced Mr Taft The result fully justifies the Progressive movement It proves beyond question that Colonel Roosevelt was the choice of a vast majority of the Republicans of the Nation as their standard-bearer, and the defeated interests responsible for the action of the National Republican Convention which deprived the Republicans of their rightful choice must accept the responsibility if their action and its results bring disaster to the Nation

To the members of the Washington Party State Central Committee, to the Chairmen and members of the County Committees the district division and precinct workers, and finally to the voters who gave their earnest and cordial support and vote to the Washington Party and the Progressive cause, I wish at this time to extend my personal thanks for the cordial co-operation received I wish especially to acknowledge with full appreciation the aid rendered the Progressive cause by these earnest, energetic and patriotic women who openly identified themselves with the movement and rendered such valuable assistance

While it is true we have not won the Presidency, it is also true that the cause for which we fought which had its inspiration less than five months ago, has demonstrated that the people of Pennsylvania, indeed, I may say the people of the Nation, can arise in their might and in a short space of a few months perfect an organization that can enter a fight for a great principle and put an old party organization to rout

It remains now for the Progressives of our State to say at once whether they are earnest in this work If so, let steps be taken immediately to make manifest the determination of the Washington Party to go on with the work of strengthening its organization throughout the State and in preparing for the next contest With this end in view, will you at once advise how the Washington Party Progressives of your county or district desire this work carried forward

Again thanking you for the personal consideration which I received at the hands of yourself and all Washington Party representatives with whom I may have been in contact and for the cordial assistance rendered in the campaign, I am

Yours very truly,
THOMAS L HICKS
Chairman

A JAPANESE LEGEND.

It Tells a Pretty Story of the Origin of the Chrysanthemum.

The Japanese have an interesting legend in connection with the origin of the chrysanthemum In a garden bathed in the soft moonlight a young girl plucked a flower and commenced to strip the petals to see if her fiance loved her truly Of a sudden a little god appeared before her and assured her that her fiance loved her passionately Your husband will live" he added "as many years as the flower which I will let you choose has petals With these words he disappeared The young girl hastened to search the garden for a flower which should have an abundance of petals, but each one appeared to promise but a brief future for her beloved

At length she picked a Persian carnation and, with the aid of a gold pin taken from her hair, she separated each one of the petals of the flower so as to increase the number of follicles and of the number of years accorded by the god to her fiance Soon under her deft fingers 100 200, 300 petals thin pliant and beautifully curved had been evolved and the young girl cried for joy to think of the happy future which her ruse had assured her fiance So runs the legend was the chrysanthemum created one moonlight night in a Japanese garden, where all very brooks murmured softly as they ran beneath the little bamboo bridges —London Globe

Shaving the Bridegroom

The shaving of the bridegroom on the we ding day is a Bulgarian custom which handed down from pre Christian days is still observed with due formality, especially in country districts While the barber is at his task a dancing crowd of young folks surrounds him and the bridegroom As the latter's hair is cut the snippings are carefully collected by some of the girls for preservation in one of the bride's chests The barber when his work is done receives a small white linen cloth as a present and also a trifling sum of money from each person there Then the bridegroom kisses the hands of the girls washes his face and dons his wedding dress which must first be carefully weighed three times by one of the boys

A Candid Man

"Are you looking for work?"

"No sir I'm looking for money but I'm willing to work because that's the only way I can get it '—Boston Transcript.

Lost and Found,

"Almost too strange to be true" said a woman who had lost and found again a piece of jewelry a few days ago On arriving at her husband's office in the Wall street district she discovered that an amethyst was missing from an ornament which she wore The prongs which held it had evidently worn away and the stone was given up for lost. She went on a shopping tour and when leaving the Seventy second street subway station on her way home dropped her muff She stooped to pick it up and close to one of the iron pillars saw her lost amethyst. 'I was so glad to find it,' she said "but people don't believe the story Even my husband made a queer face when I told it."—New York Tribune

PICTURESQUE MOORS

They Range in Color From Black to Caucasian Fairness

Imagine a thin tall bearded clean cut individual, black hair and eyes, his complexion ranging in color from that of the negro to Caucasian fairness, clothed in richly embroidered undergarments, over which gracefully fall the folds of a finely woven haik or jellaba, his stockinged feet shoved into yellow slippers on his shaved head a red fez, about which is wound a spotless white turban—and you have a type of the town Moroccan—the Moor

The coarse brown jellaba of camel's or goat's hair sometimes handed down through several generations occasionally sandals and a small tight fitting woolen cap make up the costume of the countryman, although one finds him oftener barefoot and bareheaded, head shaved save for the little cue which characterizes the Berber and Kabyle who believe that at the last day this will be used as a sort of handle with which they will be hauled up to heaven

He is often a nomadic trader and arranges his journeys so as to be at the town on certain market days and at these times one may see these men with their goods on heavy draft camels or overloaded donkeys steadily trudging their way over the rough caravan trails They earn their bare existence indeed which may be swept away in a moment by mountain brigands or the town robbers who often sit in high places —Charles W Furlong in Outing Magazine.

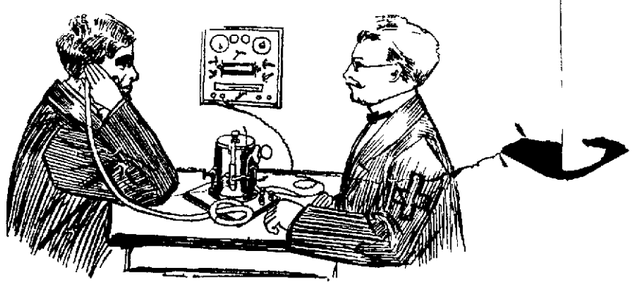
Nail in His Lung

Boy's "Pneumonia" Puzzles Doctors

Sometimes They Change Diagnosis to Typhoid, But it Took Four Years For Them to Find the Truth.



TREATING DEAFNESS WITH RADIO

This briefly sets the case of 8 year old Vincent Magnan of 180 West Sixty fourth street, New York City

A physician diagnosed the case as "pneumonia" and in due time Vincent was pronounced cured

Thereafter he had light attacks about four times a year, until finally he had another attack and his case was again diagnosed "typhoid" by another physician but after further illness the X ray disclosed the true cause of the boy's ill health—a nail in the lungs

As strange and alarming as this case may seem it is in a sense not unusual thousands of cases of disease are being guessed at daily it being next to impossible to diagnose an illness with the aid of symptoms alone, owing to the fact that two or even more ailments or chronic diseases of different character or in other words produced by entirely different causes, may produce similar symptoms or symptoms so minutely different, as to fool the average physician nine times out of ten We must see into the human body to be sure of correct diagnosis And this is what the celebrated staff of physicians are doing every day at the offices of the Atomo Radio Institute—looking into hundreds of human bodies with the aid of the most truly marvelous invention of the age the Atomoscope

This wonderful apparatus actually shows to the naked eye every portion of the patient's body, and by means of its phenomenal powers a friend or relative of the patient can actually see the heart in action the rise and fall of the diaphram, a spoonful of bismuth passing down the throat and into the stomach All this can be seen as plain as if looking through a pane of glass

Time and time again it has shown an ulcerated stomach mistaken by physicians for cancer of the stomach The physicians of the Atomo Radio Institute have often proved with the aid of their marvelous apparatus, that symptoms denoting valvular affection of the heart, were really caused by an enlarged stomach and that the heart was not in the least diseased, but in reality only affected by the abnormal condition of the stomach

This is done without necessitating the removal of a part and is superior to the X Ray in the respect that darkness is not essential Remember the only place in the State of Pennsylvania where this brilliant scientific invention is in operation is at the offices of the Atomo Radio Institute

The long course of ordinary study required for even a practical knowledge of the operation of this triumph of the 19th century is made as well as its enormous initial cost places it far beyond the reach of the ordinary medical man In fact many of the most elaborately equipped hospitals have been able to stand the gigantic cost of the apparatus itself let alone the practical possibility of securing specialists skilled enough to successfully operate it

Think what it means you have been suffering not really knowing the reason why

What a blessing to the man or woman of moderate or even poor circumstances to be placed within his or her reach an Institute to which he or she may go with a comfort ing feeling that after they have been examined they KNOW the cause of their suffering which is more than half of the battle—the cure then being simple

The name Atomo Radio means just what it implies—ELECTRICITY—the great new current Radio, a child can take it in carefully could be properly centered and directed it would revolutionize the practice of medicine and cure all diseases

All chronic diseases of men women and children are treated

A Bull Moose Song.

Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground."]

Through the states some things are passing,
Passing day by day.
Progressives still are massing,
Ready for the next affray,
And handmarks we are toting,
We are now no more;
We've heard the "Cannon" firing,
Down and out are many more.

CHORUS

All through the nation,
Hear the marching sound.
The Bull Moose will beat creation
When four years come around.

Clocks are many changing,
Election day.
All Democrats are still a ranging,
Will be found they're here to stay.
Wait sixteen you will hear them—
Hear their war cry on the ground,
"Bull Moose" then shall fear them;
Listen! Don't you hear the sound?

CHORUS

Down by the river
Are his mills, a group;
Poor old Joseph he is mourning.
All his "Beanie" are in the soup.
Asbury, Pa.

COUNCIL MEETING

Borough's Business for the Month Transacted in a Half-Hour--Record of Proceedings.

The regular monthly meeting of the Bristol borough council was held last Monday evening and transacted the municipal business in the short time of 29 minutes. The absent members were Messrs. King, Mulligan, Fine, Strauser, C. G. Young and F. Young.

The Finance and Public Property committee reported ("Progress") on matters in hand. The Street and Fire committee made no reports.

POLICE REPORT.

The Police committee reported that during the month of October the officers made 16 arrests, 4 for assault and battery, 3 for disorderly conduct and 9 for drunkenness. Fourteen street incandescent lights were reported out during the month and 81 tramps were lodged in the station house.

MEAT INSPECTION.

The Health, Sanitation and Poor committee submitted the report of Dr. W. A. Haines, the meat inspector, for the months of July, August, September and October, as follows:

July--165 postmortem examinations of meat carcasses, 150 calves, 10 sheep and 5 beef. All passed as to healthfulness for food.

August—88 postmortem examinations, 78 calves, 10 beef. All passed.

MEDICAL SOCIETY ANNUAL MEETING

The Bucks County Medical Society held its annual meeting at Doylestown, on Wednesday. A large number of physicians from every section of the county were present. Dr. Frank B. Swartzlander, Doylestown, presided over the meeting and Dr. Anthony F. Myers, Blooming Glen, acted as secretary.

The leading address of the session was delivered by Dr. William H. Hartzell, ex-president of the State Medical Society, Allentown.

The following officers were elected: President Dr. Walter H. Brown, Richlandtown.

Vice-presidents, Dr. James E. Groff, Doylestown, and Dr. Joseph B. Heritage, Langhorne.

Secretary and Treasurer, Dr. Anthony F. Myers, Blooming Glen.

Board of Censors, Dr. George M. Grim, Ottsville. Dr. William R. Cooper, Point Pleasant; Dr. Walter H. Brown, Richlandtown.

Among the physicians present from the lower end of the county were Dr. Howard Pursell and Dr. James Collins, Bristol; Dr. James N. Richards, Fallsinton; Dr. Joseph B. Heritage and Dr. Harry L. Thomas, Langhorne.

DEMOCRATS PARADE OVER BIG VICTORY

After having been held in leash for twenty long, lean years, the Democrats of Bristol turned out on the streets Wednesday night with a big parade, celebrating Democracy's triumph in the county and nation.

There was plenty of music and red fire. The procession included ward delegation floats, gaily caparisoned horses bearing riders in fantastic garbs, and marchers carrying transparancies, with various inscriptions displaying the political sentiments of the paraders. Such statements as these were printed on the banners. "The Fourth Ward Could Not be Bought," "Bean is in the Soup," "Wilson, That's All," etc.

A little donkey, a living emblem of Democracy, was a feature of the parade.

A band from Trenton and one from Burlington furnished inspiring music. A number of candidates for postmaster were on horseback. The marchers were given a rousing cheer by a crowd of Ball Movers in front of the Progressive League headquarters on Mill street.

Many Candidates for Postmaster.

It will require the wisdom of a Solomon for Congressman Difenderfer to select candidates for postmaster in the various towns in the Eighth district without leaving many sore spots, especially if other towns and boroughs have as many candidates for one position as has Bristol.

Among the number aspiring to succeed Postmaster Minster the following have been mentioned: James McGinley, John P. Betz, Chauncey E. Stoneback, Dominick Barrett, Edward L. Leigh, Neal McIlvaine and Benjamin Skinn.

Mr. Minster's term does not expire for over two years, but a Democratic national administration may terminate his tenure of office before that time.

Expressman Injured.

George Fisher, of Washington street, Bristol, the expressman, had a narrow escape from serious injury Wednesday morning while leading a horse up Pond street. Mr. Fisher had occasion to hire an extra horse for his work on Wednesday and had secured one at a down town livery-men and was leading it up Pond street to his stable. When opposite the Ardrey machine shop Mr. Fisher touched the horse lightly in the side to hurry him along. The horse leaped into the air throwing Mr. Fisher down and cutting ugly gashes in his head.

The horse then turned and ran down Pond street as far as Mulberry street, where he was caught. Mr. Fisher was conveyed home in the wagon of a friend who happened along just in time.

Only one man in over three hundred in the United States is in the army or navy, while in Germany the proportion is one in thirty.

Ushers' Union Will Dine.

The Ushers' Union of the Methodist church will give it's annual banquet Thursday evening, December 19th.

The ushers this year will follow their usual custom of inviting all male members of the church.

Progressives Organize.

All members of the Progressive League of Bristol and all others who desire to become affiliated with this organization are requested to attend a meeting at the League headquarters on Mill street on next Monday evening, when a permanent organization will be effected, by the election of officers, etc

Judge Carey Talked to Men.

Judge Robert E. Carey, of Jersey City, talked to an audience of over two hundred men last Sunday afternoon at the Bristol Baptist church. Judge Carey's topic was "Guilt and Innocence." Instead of making a formal address the speaker indulged in a heart to heart talk with the men. He spoke for an hour and was listened to attentively. Harry Bunting and daughter, Miss Jennie Bunting, sang.

St. Marks Church Robbed.

Monday between the hours of 7 and 11 some degenerate individual broke open the box into which the parishioners of St. Marks parish had dropped their contributions for the poor. The theft is one of those kind we seldom hear of in Bristol.

The box is located in the entrance of the church and was locked.

The thief broke off the locks and took the contents, the amount of which is unknown.

Children's Services.

Rev. Edward W. Rushton will preach the second of his series of sermons to children next Sunday morning at 10.30.

Every third Sunday of each month has been set aside as the day upon which Rev. Rushton gives short talks to the "little ones."

These talks are illustrated by Rev. Rushton sketching with charcoal and they prove to be of great interest to old as well as young.

Youth Stole Father's Horse.

Chester Pinckney, the 14-year-old son of Eli Pinckney, of Spruce street, was arrested in Philadelphia, Sunday, for stealing a horse from his father and a wagon from Joseph Duffy, and was given a hearing Wednesday morning before 'Squire Kraft. His guilt was confessed and the 'Squire bound him over to court.

Young Pinckney was captured in Philadelphia where he attempted to sell the team for $3.50.

Elks' Memorial Service.

A committee of members of the Bristol Lodge of Elks, consisting of Doron Green, Lewis T. Radan, Charles Williamson, Horace Cornell and Joseph S. Thomas, is making preparations for the annual memorial service of the lodge which will be held in Riverside Theatre Sunday afternoon, December 1. The services of Miss Amanda Gilbert, of Philadelphia, have been secured as soloist. Announcement of the full programme will be made later.

Suffragists Talk from Automobile.

On Tuesday evening in front of the Family Theatre, Bristol, Miss Witherspoon and Miss Bygot, of Bryn Mawr, addressed an audience that assembled on the sidewalk. The subject of the addresses was "Votes for Women." They spoke from the automobile belonging to Gen. Russell Burton, who with a short address introduced the speakers. The ladies were listened to attentively as they told of the purpose of the women's suffrage movement.

Epworth League Social.

The Epworth League of the Bristol Methodist church will give another one of their delightful monthly receptions, Thursday evening, November 21, in the basement of the church.

The Halloween social given under the auspices of this society proved a great success and this one, which will be a "Nut Social," promises to be a very enjoyable affair also. An admission of 5 cents will be charged to help defray the expense of the refreshments which will be provided.

Christmas Festival.

A Christmas festival will be held in the basement of the Methodist church, December 5th, 6th, and 7th. This festival promises to be an unique affair. The room will be gaily decorated and the various booths will be presided over by young ladies who will request you to buy their wares.

There will be a department set aside as a restaurant where a light lunch can be partaken of for the small sum of 15 cents. There will be a handkerchief booth, a candy booth, a cake booth, a booth for fancy work and a fruit booth.

Tullytown Man kills Himself.

After having been on a prolonged debauch, Edward Butt, a well known character about Tullytown, was found dead in the borough lock-up on Sunday morning with his throat cut.

Butt was a farm hand about 50 years old and had been working on the farm of Morton Bond at Penns Manor.

The exact time of death is not known. Butt was locked up on account of being drunk. He used a small pocket knife to cut his throat, several attempts evidently having been made, as there were three or four slashes on his neck. The jugular vein was severed. Butt was a bachelor and had lived in Tullytown for many years.

Father of Capt. F. G. Edwards Dead.

Captain E. B. Edwards, one of the oldest and best-known sailing masters along the Delaware river, died Sunday, after a long period of ill-health, at his home, No. 3708 north Sydenham street, Philadelphia. Born in Cape May county, New Jersey, he shipped as cabin boy on a coasting vessel carrying coal to Eastern and Southern ports. He commanded the vessel that carried the last cargo of coal into Richmond during the Civil War.

During the first term of William S. Stokley as Mayor the city purchased a small steamer, the Wave, for harbor police work and Captain Edwards was placed in command. This service had heretofore been confined to small boats, with David Martin as lieutenant. Later the police tug Stokley was built and Captain Edwards was transferred to her, remaining in command until a few years ago, when his eyesight failed. He could see clearly on the darkest night, but was almost blind in daylight. His funeral took place on Tuesday. He is survived by his widow, one son and a daughter.

Captain Edwards was the father of Captain Frank G. Edwards, formerly of Bristol.

Bucks Countian Looks Like Wilson.

Charles T. Harrison, formerly editor of the Hulmeville Advance, has for a number of years been engaged by the government as a good roads expert. He is now located in Mississippi. The following concerning Mr. Harrison is taken from the October 3rd issue of the Columbus, Miss., Commercial:

"It has often been said that somewhere in the world each man and woman has his or her exact counterpart, and Charles T. Harrison, the government expert who is here to devise an up-to-date system of public roads for Lowndes county, is enough like Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic presidential nominee, to be his twin brother, the likeness is so striking that numerous people have noticed it, and, in fact, it has been a subject of general comment.

"Mr. Harrison is the prototype of Gov. Wilson in build and height, while their facial appearances are almost exactly the same and both men wear glasses. Mr. Harrison may not be as great a man as the Democratic presidential nominee, but he is an expert in his chosen vocation and probably knows as much about good roads as the governor does about law, literature and politics."

OFFICIAL COUNT OF VOTE IN COUNTY

Democrats Had a Safe Plurality for all Candidates.

The work of officially computing Bucks county's election return was finished last Friday night at 11 o'clock. Judge Ryan and his assistants began the work at noon on Thursday and continued for seven hours and started in again at 9 o'clock Friday morning. The task was a big one. There were 88 districts and each return required the clerks to put down 384 sets of about 600 figures.

The task was greatly lengthened by the unusually large number of electoral tickets in the field and the fact that the vote gotten for each candidate for elector had to be put down. To make it more complicated a number of the candidates were on several tickets.

The official count shows that Oscar O. Bean for Congress ran ahead of President Taft by 603 votes.

The returns show that the Democrats polled about 80 per cent. of their votes in the county. Wilson, who polled 6773 votes received 460 votes less than Bryan in 1908, who received 7233, the Republicans polled over 90 per cent. of their vote.

Taking the vote of Powell for auditor general 8962 as representing the total Republican vote of Taft and Roosevelt in the county, shows that but for the interjection of the third party, President Taft, Oscar O. Bean and the Republican assembly candidates would have carried the county by over 2300 majority.

Pointers on the Election.

In the West Rockhill election district, Bucks county, Roosevelt defeated Taft sixteen to one. President Taft got one lone vote, Roosevelt 16 and Wilson 67.

In Quakertown at the recent election, the Roosevelt vote exceeded the Taft vote in each of the three wards. The same conditions prevailed in the three wards of Perkasie.

Oscar O. Bean got one more vote in the First ward of Bristol than Irving P. Wanger received two years ago. He received six less than Wanger did in the Second ward, one less in the Third, forty more than Wanger did in the Fourth and five more than Wanger in the Fifth. Mr. Bean was fifteen votes short in his home town compared with Mr. Wanger's vote of two years ago.

The Democrats and Republicans in Bucks and Montgomery counties did themselves in a sort of queer predicament since the election. In many of the boroughs and townships in the two counties the Bull Moose ticket was first and in others second. Where the Democrats or Republicans are in third place, it is said that they cannot nominate election officers for that, under the law, is left to the two parties having the two highest votes. In the First, Second and Fifth wards of Bristol, according to this rule, the Democrats will not be entitled to make nominations for election officers. There are other districts in the county like Dublin borough, Hilltown districts, the Milfords, the three Perkasie wards, the three wards of Quakertown, the Republicans will not be entitled to representation on the election boards.

Farewell Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Watson, of Lafayette street, Bristol, last Sunday gave a farewell party to Mr. and Mrs. Horace Firth and family of Wood street. Mr. Firth will leave shortly for Washington, D. C., where he will become engaged as manager of a large meat store, but his wife and family will reside here until Mr. Firth locates a residence in the Capitol city. The many friends of the Firths expressed their sorrow in losing such genial and companionable friends as Mr. and Mrs. Firth. Mr. Firth has been in charge of the meat department at Child's Dorrance store for the past year.

Elks Entertain Bride and Groom.

Some kindred spirits and members of Bristol lodge of Elks on last Monday evening proceeded to the home of Charles Spring and took into custody Mr. Spring and his bride and the former's mother and conveyed them to the Elks' home where they were escorted to the library. A delegation from the borough council then went to the borough council chamber and summoned Louis Spring, father of the young bridegroom. A reception was tendered the young couple and a jolly time ensued. Exalted ruler members of the Elks amused themselves by guizzing the bride and groom as to the proper method to pursue to get to the matrimonial state. Neither Mr Spring nor his bride would impart any information on the subject.

To the music of a wedding march, played by George Summerfield, the blind musician, the guests were ushered to the social session hall where an attractive luncheon was served. William V. Leech acted as toastmaster and many pleasant things were said and many pleasant toasts were drunk concerning the young guests of honor. The bachelors not hesitating to express envy of the fortunate young groom. The evening was one long to be remembered.

Why He Balked.

A young and husky college man who was traveling on a steamer across the Atlantic was asked to box five rounds with an equally husky chap, who was a fellow passenger, as part of a series of athletic games which were to be held for the amusement of the passengers. Next day the young man came to the chairman of the sports committee and asked that his name be withdrawn. "What's the matter? Are you afraid?" said the chairman, somewhat piqued. "You bet your life I'm afraid," said the collegian. "That fellow you picked for my opponent sits at my table, and at dinner last night he leaned over to me and said, 'What's this thing "demitasse" I see on the menu?' I knew right away that he was a 'rough guy' who had lived all his life in the open. If you want me to fight you've got to find a man that knows a demitasse when he sees it."—New York Tribune.

THIEVES GATHER LOT OF VALUABLES

Enter Home of Frank Minster and Steal Quantity of Jewelry.

Last Friday evening while Mr. and Mrs. Frank Minster, their daughter, Miss Marie Minster and the latter's guest, Miss Mabel Groff, were attending the amateur entertainment given by the Y. M. A. at Riverside Theatre, Bristol, thieves entered their home, 125 Jefferson avenue, and stole several hundred dollars worth of jewels belonging to each member of the family and to Miss Groff.

The lights on the second floor were all burning when the family returned and it is believed that the robbers left by the rear as the family entered the front door. It is also thought that work was just begun upon the ransacking of the upper front rooms as the lights were just turned on there, according to neighbors, a short time before the family returned home. Neighbors heard the Minster dog barking and investigated but failed to find anything wrong. Entrance was gained by the forcing open of a rear window.

Although one or two persons are under suspicion of having committed the theft, no definite clue has been obtained. Mr. Minster is a brother of Postmaster Minster.

LIST OF VALUABLES TAKEN, ETC.

Besides $41 in cash the following is a list of valuables stolen:

One chain of broken pearls, string of gold beads, silver watch, gold signet ring with initial M., gold 1910 class ring, plain gold chain, chain of pink stones, two pearl breast pins, three gold bracelets, string of coral beads, a clasp monogram, engraved with M. G., a chased gold bracelet, a gold bar pin, a pearl breast pin, a gold coat chain, a gold rope chain, a gold locket and gold heart, two gold crosses, three small gold pins, a pair of gold glasses and chain, two cameo pins, one heavy gold bracelet, gold watch with monogram, H. E. M., gold watch chain, pair of diamond ear-rings, belonging to Mrs. Fred Larzlere, pair of pearl ear-rings and a pair of jet ear-rings, neck chain with topaz, two hand painted pins, gold locket with turquoise, watch chain with gold locket, with monogram F. M., and Odd Fellows emblem and a gold neck chain with coral locket.

ANNUAL MEETING OF WELFARE ASS'N

Last Friday evening the Public Welfare Association, of Bristol, held its annual meeting in the director's room of the Bristol high school.

The reports of the various committees were read and listened to with a great deal of interest.

An appropriation of 25 per cent. of the net receipts from "tag day" was set aside for the use of the Playground committee which did such excellent work during the past summer.

The Welfare Association is doing an excellent work in Bristol. It is impossible for anyone to know the work this association is doing unless they attend the meetings and hear the reports of the committees.

One of the greatest difficulties this organization is experiencing is to get a sufficient number of our town people who will become active workers, and interested in the work.

If any of the citizens of the town will volunteer to assist any of the various committees it will be greatly appreciated.

In order to show the remarkable influence the Welfare Association has over one who has become interested in its work, a case of a few weeks ago will be cited briefly. Two inebriates were walking along the street reeling from one side of the pavement to the other when they were seen by a member of the Welfare Association to enter a saloon, evidently to secure more liquor, but by quick and heroic action of this Welfare member who followed upon the saloon and requested the person in charge not to sell them any more, they were prevented from becoming further intoxicated, so it was reported at the meeting.

Bristol is so unfortunate as to have a number of "perpetual drunks" who can be seen every day upon its streets and in fact a certain "spot" in our town as a general thing is the headquarters of these poor creatures.

The question is asked "where do they get it?"

It is the intention of the Welfare to provide a way whereby any person furnishing liquor to these "perpetual drunks" will be severely punished.

It is desired that the saloon keepers and bottlers of the town co-operate with the association and thereby remove a very objectionable feature of their business.

The same officers of the association were re-elected for the coming year.

LOCAL TROLLEY ITEMS.

The residents of the new and thriving settlements of Headley Manor and Riverview Farms are much pleased by the announcement that the Trenton, Bristol and Philadelphia Street Railway Company is soon to erect a waiting room for the accomodation of trolley passengers. It will be located at the corner of Edgely avenue, and work on it will be commenced within a few days.

The four months tie-up of trolley traffic over the Croydon bridge is at an end. The repairs have finally been completed and as soon as the injunction shall have been vacated through traffic will be resumed. It is expected that this will be done this week and the long continued anno

Beauty in Distress Appeals to Staid Professor

By AGNES C. BROGAN

As Professor Bruce came out upon the highway to saw an automobile standing in the middle of the road, its two great red eyes sending a cheering light down the darkened pathway.

That morning as he had been sitting in his gloomy room at the university the voice of spring had called to him through an open window, and, as the professor was still young enough to listen to the voice of spring, he laid aside that interesting volume of metaphysical research, purchased a fishing rod and boarded the nearest trolley that might carry him to some ideal spot where country fields and trout streams did abound. It had been a glorious, restful day, though the catch was not worth bringing home.

As he approached the automobile a girl stood up in the tonneau. "Oh, pardon me," called a clear young voice, "do you know anything about automobiles?" The young professor drew nearer and looked up at the owner of the voice. She was very pretty, quite the prettiest girl he had ever seen.

"I believe so," he answered smilingly. "Can I be of any assistance?"

She hesitated a moment. "If you would kindly look the machine over," she said. Then she laughed. "I can't make the thing go." She descended the steps and stood beside him. "I have been waiting alone so long," she continued. "You can't think how relieved I am to find a possible rescuer."

Then Bruce noticed that the long cloak which she wore hung open, disclosing a white dress of so filmy a texture that even he could discern its fineness, and in her hands the girl held a great bunch of fragrant white roses, tied together with white satin ribbon.

She peered anxiously down the road. "There is a little electric torch under the seat," she suggested, "in case that you may need more light."

The professor stepped into the car and was about to remove a box from the seat when he looked at the girl in surprise, for the open box contained a large cake, whose white surface was covered with cunningly wrought flowers and cupids of sugar. The girl laughed up at his puzzled face. "It's a wedding cake," she said frankly then resumed her seat in the tonneau. "Perhaps I had better tell you all about it.

"You may have heard of my father William J. Gordon?" Bruce nodded assent.

"Who has not?" he asked, then added, "He is a very wealthy man."

Miss Gordon smiled ruefully. "Yes," she said, "and Teddy Van Voort is poor. That is why we were obliged to plan this elopement. You see, Teddy has been a frequent visitor at our home ever since he was a little chap at school. Why, we grew up together. Father liked him, too, until he found that he wanted to marry his daughter then"—with a little shudder—"there was an awful time. Father called Teddy a fortune hunter and forbade him to enter the house. I warned father that there would be an elopement one of these days."

"'If you attempt anything of that kind,' father told Teddy, 'mark my words, I shall have you arrested for absconding with my daughter, who is still under age. You are old enough to have sense.'

"Well, we knew that he would forgive us after it was all over, so we started out very early this morning and procured the license. I insisted upon having a wedding cake, and Teddy bought the roses. We stopped at the Country club for luncheon and intended going on to have the marriage ceremony performed in Eastdale this afternoon, but we had just finished luncheon—our table stood quite near the telephone—when I overheard a conversation which indicated that father had discovered our plans and would send some one or come himself in time to prevent their fulfillment. I caught Teddy by the sleeve and told him to hurry away."

Miss Gordon smiled at the recollection.

"He hurried," she said. "We held [illegible] side of the automobile, while [illegible] and the houses flew by so [illegible] fast one couldn't see. We came tearing out upon the highway and then, right here, suddenly stopped. There seemed to be no hope of reaching Eastdale before the—er—searching party should arrive, so I persuaded Teddy to go on to the junction, where he might be fortunate enough to [illegible] train out, while I remained here."

"Do you mean to tell me," Bruce [illegible] hotly, "that the fellow left you alone in a disabled machine—left you to bear the brunt of your father's anger, while he calmly made his way to safety?"

"Why, I made him go," the girl [illegible] swored naively. "They could [illegible] Teddy, but I have nothing to fear."

The professor laid aside his [illegible] preparatory to examining the machine. "I think," he said slowly, "that it is doubly fortunate this elopement has been interrupted. I intend to take you safely home to your father and, incidentally, tell him what sort of end this Van Voort is, in my opinion."

Miss Gordon laughed merrily. "Oh, you could not tell father anything derogatory to Teddy's character which he has not thought or expressed long ago," she said.

As the professor worked the moon came peeping over the treetops. The girl arose suddenly, her figure standing out distinctly in the white light, the roses in her arms. "An automobile is rushing toward us," she said. "It will either be some one Teddy has sent to rescue me or else"— The sentence remained unfinished. In a cloud of dust a great white steam machine swung around directly before them. It bore two occupants in addition to the chauffeur. One of the men leaped out and came toward her.

"Miss Gordon?" he said questioningly. She bowed. The man passed around quickly to the rear of the automobile, "Right number, Joe," he called, then walked up to Bruce, who had ceased his labor and stood waiting developments. "Mr. Van Voort," said the official quietly, "if you will step into our car we will take you back to Mr. Gordon's residence. He wants to see you."

This was something that Professor Bruce had not counted upon. "What are you talking about?" he said angrily. "My name is not Van Voort."

The man smiled insolently.

"I suppose not," he said. "We were sent out here to interrupt a wedding party. Our instructions were to run down automobile 11,682 and bring back William J. Gordon's daughter and her companion, Theodore Van Voort. This looks like a pretty plain case to me, wedding flowers and"—he glanced at the gorgeous cake—"all the fixings."

Bruce turned impatiently to the girl who stood a silent listener. "Why don't you tell him I am not the man he is after?" he asked indignantly.

"This gentleman is not Theodore Van Voort, really," she answered obediently.

"Well, then, what is his name?" the man inquired. Miss Gordon looked doubtfully from Bruce to the official.

"Why, I—I don't know," she stammered. The men grinned. Bruce silently deliberated. If it should ever get around town that he, Professor Bruce, the confirmed bachelor and sedate student, had even been suspected of being party to an elopement with a pretty girl the fellows at the club would have fun with him for months to come.

"All right," he said at length. "I will go with you but you will probably hear from Mr. Gordon for allowing the guilty man to escape. You are making a big blunder."

"I'm willing to take chances on that," said the official. "Now, Joe, you'd better run this machine. Mr. Van Voort can sit beside you. Pardon me, Miss Gordon; I will have to be your companion in the back seat. Freddie can bring your auto along behind."

So the procession started. Bruce leaned back and with tightly compressed lips reflected upon the peculiar ending of his holiday. Presently a small voice whispered in his ear. "If you are half as hungry as I," it said, "you will have a piece of cake." Miss Gordon was leaning forward with arms resting upon the seat before her. The audacious conduct of this young person did not tend to soothe the ruffled feelings of the professor. He turned, intending to curtly refuse the proffered cake, and found himself looking directly into her shining eyes. The grim lines of his face relaxed into a smile. "Thank you," he said.

"I am so ashamed," said the low voice, "to have placed you in such an embarrassing position but"—the eyes twinkled—"Teddy will be grateful."

"I can dispense with Van Voort's gratitude," the professor answered shortly.

"Oh, you would like Teddy if you knew him," the girl said enthusiastically. "He is such an honest, kind hearted big fellow."

"I believe now in the old adage 'Love is blind,'" Bruce replied slowly. Miss Gordon opened her eyes very wide.

"Why, I am not in the least bit in love with Teddy," she said. "Nevertheless I can appreciate his fine qualities. He will make a good husband."

The professor spoke sharply. "You defied your father to marry a man for whom you had no affection?"

The girl thoughtfully regarded the moon.

"I must say," Bruce said, "that you have borne the disappointment of having your hopes frustrated in a very cheerful manner."

"The disappointment was of no consequence," she answered, a smile hovering about her lips. "The ceremony will take place later; that is all."

Bruce heard Miss Gordon laugh softly and turned in a vain endeavor to see her face.

The automobile rolled down an avenue bordered with trees and stopped at the imposing entrance of a great house, where lights shone from many windows. Miss Gordon ran lightly up the steps, while the others followed.

"Here we are, father!" she called.

A very distinguished and very angry old gentleman advanced to meet the party.

"Where is Van Voort?" he asked sharply. The officer blinked his eyes stupidly and pointed to Bruce.

"We ran down automobile 11,682 in Hampton road," he answered, "and this man was the only person with your daughter at the time."

"Your orders," said the old man cuttingly, "were to find my youngest daughter, Selina, and her fiance, Theodore Van Voort. You have evidently made a mess of things."

The girl tossed the drooping roses into a chair and clasped her father's arm.

"Send the men away, daddy," she said soothingly, "and I will tell you all about it."

"Where will Selina be?" her father cried furiously.

A maid entered the room and placed a yellow envelope in Miss Gordon's hand. "It is a telegram," the girl announced and read aloud:

Teddy and I were married at 7 o'clock this evening. Please fix it up with father. Your loving sister,

SELINA VAN VOORT.

The girl's laughing face grew serious. Her father silently left the room and motioned the official to follow.

"Wait a moment, please," she begged.

When her father returned to the room she seated herself upon the arm of his chair.

"Daddy," she began coaxingly, "believe me, it was the only thing to do. Teddy and Selina have been in love with each other all their lives, and, although Selina will not be eighteen for a month or two, she is very old for her years. If you had not forbidden them to see each other they might have been content to wait and be patient, but since that decree was issued"—Miss Gordon sighed despairingly—"I have had to chaperon many stolen meetings at various times and places. It hasn't been exactly pleasant, daddy, so when they asked me to help out with this elopement today I was forced to agree. We have not made a great success of Selina's training, you and I. Perhaps Teddy may know a better way. They were very happy the evening, and when I heard that you intended to follow us and would carry out your threat, why, I knew I was sorry and remorseful you would be after it was accomplished, so it was for your sake as well as their own that she smiled over at Bruce. "That I told them to hasten through the fields to the junction, while I would try to head back the searching party when it arrived. I was wondering how best to detain them when this gentleman came suddenly into view and solved the problem for me. I am afraid that I have been very deceitful."

A smile slowly dawned in the old man's eyes. Gently he patted the little hand that rested upon his arm.

"You win out, as usual, Bess," he said and then turned to Professor Bruce.

"To whom do we owe an apology?" he asked.

The professor drew a card from his pocketbook. "That is my name," he said. "No apology is necessary."

Mr. Gordon extended his hand cordially.

"Professor Bruce!" he exclaimed. "This is indeed a pleasure. I have enjoyed many of your lectures. May we hope to see you again under more favorable circumstances?"

He was called away at this moment by a telephone message, and Bruce turned eagerly to the girl. "It remains with you," he said. "Shall I come?"

Miss Gordon smiled up at him. "Do," she answered. "I may need your assistance in carrying out another elopement."

"Next time," he replied, with unwonted daring, "I shall not promise to return the bride, and now," he held out his hand, "good night."

The girl hesitated. "Must you go?" she asked.

The professor thought of his unfinished lecture; then his eyes met hers. "I will stay, if I may," he said.

Catching Wild Ducks in England.

A novel method of capturing wild ducks is used in England. On small lakes where the ducks are apt to stop for a short time a few tame ducks are kept as decoys, and a well trained dog and some wire netting do the rest. The dog is trained to act like a fox, and the wild ducks congregate in large numbers to frighten it away from a screen over which it runs back and forth. The ducks keep up a constant quacking, and the dog retreats, being pursued until the trapped fowl are caught in the network with a person dropped over the opening to prevent their escape. At certain seasons of the year thousands of wild ducks frequent the fen districts, and these traps have been used very successfully to provide game for some of the large preserves.—Harper's.

Contrary to Fact.

The phrenologist was examining the bumps on Sambo's head.

A Pardonable Paradox.

"That young son-in-law of mine," said Mr. Cumrox, "says I'm unreasonable. And maybe he's right."

"What's the trouble?"

"Before their marriage I objected to his attentions to my daughter. Now I'm objecting to his inattention."—Washington Star.

Not a Monotonous Life.

Too Costly.

"According to this paper," said Mrs. Naggs, "widows make the best wives."

"I don't doubt it, my dear," replied Naggs, "but nevertheless I don't feel justified in shuffling off at the present moment merely for the sake of making a good wife of you."

Tonsiline Cures Sore Throat

The throat is one of the most delicate parts of the body. It is also one of the most important, and should be given the best possible care.

The throat is the gateway to the body. The air we breathe, the food we eat, the liquids we drink, all pass through it. It is very easily affected by cold, strain, exposure, etc., and Sore Throat is therefore one of our most common ailments. Strangely enough, it is also one of the most neglected.

Sore Throat is a very serious matter, for the whole system is in danger in consequence of it.

Every Sore Throat patient is a candidate for Tonsilitis, Quinsy, Diphtheria and other serious or fatal diseases, all of which may be prevented by the timely cure of the Sore Throat by the use of TONSILINE. A dose or two will do it.

If taken in time a dose or two will cure throat disease. TONSILINE is made to cure throat disease and nothing else. It is the one remedy for this purpose sold largely in the United States. Every user endorses it; every physician, knowing its virtues, recommends it.

The most important thing to remember about TONSILINE is the fact that it really does cure Sore Throat.

HISTORIC FIRST NIGHTS.

Red Letter Events in the Dramatic History of France.

Perhaps the most striking events in the artistic history of France have been the first performances of some of the great French plays. In a few cases also these occasions have marked the beginning of new epochs in the social history of the country, so close is the connection between the social development of the people and its expression on the stage. Unless I am mistaken, there have been but six unforgettable first nights since theaters were established in Paris.

The first occurred in 1637, when Corneille's "Cid" took the capital by storm. Forty years later Racine's "Andromache" created a similar sensation. On the eve of the revolution, in 1784, Beaumarchais' "Marriage of Figaro" was received with such delirious enthusiasm that three people were stifled in the rush for seats. In 1830 Victor Hugo, in spite of the determined opposition of a large body of reactionaries, set all Paris in an uproar with his "Hernai."

These names should be borne in mind: Corneille, Racine, Beaumarchais and Victor Hugo. Three of them at least have no superiors in the history of French literature. Each has one amazing dramatic triumph to his credit. The other two of the six great first nights were the 28th of December, 1897, and the 7th of February, 1910. The occasions were respectively the performances of "Cyrano de Bergerac" and "Chantecler," both by Edmond Rostand. — Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Horseshoes in Turkey.

In many parts of Turkey horseshoes are simply a flat plate of iron with a hole in the middle. An extraordinary method still obtains in portions of the Ottoman empire of shoeing the horse.

The farrier doubles a long rope and knots a loop at the end to about the size of a large horse collar. This is put over the horse's head after the manner of a horse collar, and the knot rests on the horse's chest. The next step is to bring the two ends of the rope between the animal's legs. Each rope then, taken by a man, is hitched on the fetlocks of the horse's legs and brought through the loop in front. Then by a hard, steady pull the hind legs are drawn up to the foreleg, and the horse falls heavily on its side. All four feet are now tied together by the fetlocks, the horse is propped up on his back, and the farrier sits quietly down beside him, takes off the old shoes and puts on the new.—New York Herald.

The Pagoda on the Balanced Rock.

One of the curious sights of Burma is a huge bowlder on Kelasa heights that rests in delicate poise on the very brink of a rounded cliff. So unstable is the equilibrium that the rock trembles in the wind. Very naturally this odd freak has attracted the attention of the superstitious natives, who look upon it as a miraculous work of the gods. They believe that the rock is held in place by a hair of Buddha. Hence they have clambered to the top of the rock and built there a pagoda which is about twenty-five feet in height. Should the bowlder ever fall, as is quite likely to happen, and dash to death a handful of worshipers the blind faith of the devout people would not be shaken, for in the catastrophe, no doubt, they would see but a manifestation of divine wrath at some unconscious sin of commission or omission.

A Quaint Costume.

The Thames waterman of a former day was bound by a number of restrictions. He was the first public servant to wear a uniform. "Long before England's army and navy wore any distinguishing garb," writes Guy Nickalls, "Thames watermen were known by their uniform and badge, a parti-colored coat, knee breeches and stockings and hat according to fashion, but always a plate on the arm, either of the Waterman's hall, to denote that they had the freedom of the river and were licensed, or the badge of their employer. Any person rowing or working any boat, wherry or other vessel who had not served seven years as apprentice incurred a penalty of £10."—London Globe.

Arabian Snuff.

Snuff in Arabia is not used as it is with us, although one occasionally sees a snuffer, but the snuff is ordinarily made into a pill of about the size of a robin's egg and is placed between the lower front lip and the teeth. This manner of using snuff is common among the laboring class, and almost every coolie that is met in the street has his lower lip puffed out by a ball of snuff behind it. Arabian snuff is prepared out of the ordinary powdered tobacco, unrefined sugar and potash.

A Famous Bell.

On the watchtower of the Vela, at the Alhambra, Spain, there is a silver toned bell which the Moslems rang as a signal to let on the water in the gardens and the fountain in the city be low. Its sound can be heard at Liga, thirty miles away. The maiden who strikes it is sure of a husband before the year is out and of a good one if she rings loud enough. On certain fete days it is lively for the bell.

Power of a Song.

A pleasant incident happened at the Crystal palace in London when Mme Albani was once singing the "French Partridge." As soon as the concert was over one of the audience, a gentleman well known as a good shot and keen sportsman, called upon Mme. Albani and said, "Madam, I am sorry to say that I have shot many a little 'red leg' in my time, but after hearing you sing that song I will never kill another," a delicate compliment to a great singer—and to a song.

PRESCRIPTION

For a Long Life.

This is the prescription for a long life given by an old gentleman in Connecticut, who is ninety-nine years old and still well and cheerful, "Live temperately, be slow to anger, don't worry, take plenty of exercise in the fresh air, and, above all, keep cheerful."

Should the system get run down—digestive organs weak—the blood thin and sluggish, take Vinol, which is a delicious combination of the medicine—body-building properties of cods' livers, with the useless grease eliminated and tonic iron added. We regard Vinol as one of the greatest body-builders and strength-creators in the world for aged people.

Mrs. Mary Ivey, of Columbus, Ga., says: "If people only knew the good Vinol does old people, you would be unable to supply the demand; it is the finest tonic and strength-creator I ever used."

We wish every feeble old person in this vicinity would try Vinol on our agreement to return their money if it fails to give satisfaction.

THE EYES IN RELATION TO GENERAL HEALTH

Underlying certain symptoms of eye trouble may be grave disturbances of the general health of men and women. A searching and accurate examination will reveal to the eye of a trained optometrist what the causes are. Glasses may not be needed at all in some cases, while in others the proper glasses may cure headaches and nerve strain. I make a specialty of the use of the opthalmoscope, having acquired a thorough practical and technical knowledge of its application. For consultation call any day.

The Always-on-Duty Bell Telephone

At three or four o'clock in the morning all is asleep and dark—all except the telephone office. Over at the Bell Central Office one may see the windows alight, as if they were the watchful eyes of the sleeping city.

The operators who have watched through the night and perhaps answered a hurry call for the doctor or an alarm of fire, know when the city awakens from its night's rest. Before five o'clock the signal lights in the switchboard begin to glow more and more rapidly—the new day has begun.

All the business and social activities of the day are reflected on the Bell Telephone switchboard. The business messages rise in volume as the trade and commerce of the day reach their height and drop down again at lunch time and later, when the day is done. The residence calls bring up the total early in the morning with the marketing and shopping and again at meal times.

The Bell Telephone engineers study this traffic and ascertain the amount of equipment necessary and the number of operators required to handle the calls. Both of these must be, and are sufficient to take care of any emergency. The Public never knows when, due to some unusual cause, there is a rush hour at the telephone office. Every precaution is exercised to the end that the operator's courteous "number please" will promptly answer your call—always.

They can't help it. Wear is bred into them. It took us years to learn how, but we stuck at it; now our 5A Blankets stand supreme—they outwear three ordinary blankets. Every 5A Blanket is closely woven from the strongest, tightest-twisted yarns our expert spinners can make. And it is all done to save you money—to make one blanket do the work of three—to save you trouble and expense.

5A Horse Blankets are sold by the largest horse-blanket factory in the world direct to your dealer. Here, again, we save you money by cutting out all jobbers' commissions. You pay but one profit.

The 5A Storm King is the most popular medium-priced square blanket on the market. Extra large, extra thick, extra strong, extra warm. Weighs 8 lbs., measures 84 x 90 inches. Price only $2.50—worth twice as much. See them before you buy any other.
